

COMM-335 : Communicating Sex and Gender

Students will develop theoretical and practical understandings of the role of sex and gender in verbal and nonverbal communication, friendships, families, romantic relationships and professional relationships. This course also examines the issues of technology, health, power and violence as they related to sex and gender. Offered alternate years.

Credits 3

Term Offered

Fall Only

Session Cycle

F