

HIST-250 : Historical Methods

An introduction to historical research methods and the tools and techniques that historians use to study the past. The course focuses on the development of key research skills through the location, analysis, and use of primary and secondary sources in a variety of forms and settings. Students will also review and gain an understanding of the fundamental historiographical practices and interpretations used within the field of history.

Credits 3

Term Offered

Spring Only

Session Cycle

S

Grade Scheme

BC